Topic of the Day: Phrases

A phrase is a small group of words that work together as a unit but do NOT have both a subject and a verb.

It gives extra meaning in a sentence but cannot stand alone as a complete sentence.

Phrases and Idioms look similar because both are groups of words—but they are not the same.

Feature	Phrase	Idiom
Meaning	Literal	Non-literal
Hidden meaning	✗ No	✓ Yes
Can modify?	Yes	No
Easy to understand?	Yes	No
Example	“on the table”	“hit the sack” (go to sleep)

- ✓  When a verb + preposition (or verb + adverb) come together and act as one meaning, they form a phrasal verb.
- ✓ The meaning is different from the individual words.
- ✓ You cannot understand phrasal verbs by translating words individually.
 - Look (see) + after (behind) ≠ seeing behind
 - Look after = take care ofSo, verb + preposition act as one unit with one new meaning.
- ✓ Formula
 - ❖ Verb + Preposition = Phrasal Verb (new meaning)

○ Simple Example

Verb: look

→ meaning: to see

Verb + Preposition: look after

→ meaning: to take care of (not literally "see after")

○ Example sentence:

- I look after my little sister.

Here, look + after act as one unit with a new meaning — not just seeing something.

Activity Corner (Applied Learning Session)

Here will perform two real-life scenarios to analyze the role of phrasal expressions in daily communication and understand how they contribute to making language more powerful and engaging.

Family Scenario – “No Mobile During Meals”

 A role-play focusing on mindful family time and communication without phone distractions.

Elder Brother: Hey guys, sit down. From today, we’re going to cut out using phones while eating.

Sister: What? But I just want to check out one quick message

Elder Brother: No, please. Just switch it off and put it away.

Sister: Ugh... fine! I’ll hand over my phone for now.

Younger Brother: Me too. I’ll drop off mine in the basket.

Elder Brother: Great! Now let’s carry on with dinner without screens.

Sister: You know, without phones, we actually open up and talk over things.

Elder Brother: We shouldn’t miss out on real family time.

Sister: Agreed. Phones take away all our attention.

Younger Brother: Should we set up a rule? Like putting phones aside before meals?

Elder Brother: Yes, Let’s keep up that habit every day.

Restaurant Scenario – Waiter | Customer | Manager

A role-play showing real-life interaction, problem-solving, and service communication.

Customer: Excuse me, I've been waiting here for a while. Can someone help me look for my table?

Waiter: Of course, ma'am. Please come along and I'll help you find your table.

Customer: Thank you. Could you come over again? I'd like to order.

Waiter: Certainly. What would you like?

Customer: I'll have the pasta, but please look out for this — no garlic and onion at all.

Waiter: Absolutely ma'am, I'll go through the instructions carefully and make sure it's prepared correctly.

Customer: What is this? I asked for pasta without garlic and onion, but this is full of garlic.

Waiter: Please give me a moment. Let me check what went wrong.

Customer (angry): You should have looked after the instructions. How could this error go through?

Waiter: It might have been mixed up with another order. Please calm down — we'll fix it right away.

Customer: No, I want to talk to your manager now

Waiter: Please hold on. I'll call her immediately.

(Manager arrives)

Manager: Good evening, ma'am. I apologize for the inconvenience. Let me look into the issue personally.

Customer: I clearly asked for no garlic and Onion. This could affect my health.

Manager: I completely understand. Please don't sweat. I will go through the order details and get a fresh.

Waiter: We'll look after everything from here. Thank you for your patience.

Customer: Thank you. I appreciate how you handled the situation.

Manager: Ma'am, our restaurant is open around the clock, please visit again — we'd love to look after you next time too.

Mind the Topic

- 👉 Idioms are expressions with meanings you cannot guess from words directly.
- 👉 They do not follow a grammar formula like phrasal verbs.

Because they do NOT fit the formula:

Verb + Preposition/Adverb = New meaning

Idiom	Why not phrasal verb?
Break the ice	Has noun, not a preposition
Spill the beans	No verb+prep formula
Under the weather	Not verb+prep, and meaning is figurative
Round the clock	No verb at all
Burn the midnight oil	Longer phrase, hidden meaning

Final Rule

Phrasal Verb

- Follows a grammar formula
- Verb + preposition / adverb
- Meaning may be partly guessable
- Example: "look after", "break down", "get up"

Idiom

- Based on figurative / hidden meaning
- No fixed structure
- Meaning is not obvious from the words
- Example: "under the weather", "break the ice", "spill the beans"
